I Know What You Do When I Go To School

I Know What You Do When I Go to School is a playful yet heartfelt children's book that explores a child's imagination and how they perceive their parents' daily lives.

Originally created when Siona Talekar was just seven years old, I Know What You Do When I Go to School is a whimsical and heartfelt story that captures a child's perspective on what their mother does while they're away. The young narrator imagines her mother indulging in chocolate cake, watching movies, and enjoying a carefree day. However, the reality is quite different--her mom is actually a pediatric oncologist, working hard to care for children battling cancer. Now at thirteen, Siona has refined the book's illustrations and storytelling, creating a beautiful celebration of creativity, family, and love.

Praise for the Book:

"A delightful, imaginative book that beautifully captures the innocent curiosity of children. Siona Talekar's storytelling is both humorous and touching, making this a must-read for parents and kids alike."

"An inspiring story by a young author that reminds us how children view the world in their own unique and creative ways!"
